"As someone with limited prior knowledge in selecting and vetting charitable causes, I value the Jewish Community Foundation's expertise. The experts at the Center for Designed Philanthropy understand the Rautenberg Foundation's goals and are enormously collaborative. They bring a structured, methodical, and organized pragmatism to the process. It gives me great confidence to see the thoughtful approach they take to awarding grants."

"I was raised to give to charity. Whether or not you were poor, and my family was, there was always someone you could help. My late husband, Jack, of blessed memory, and I tried to instill in our children the values we learned from our parents. And in turn, our children have instilled those values in their children. With The Foundation's guidance on creative ways of involving our family in philanthropy, we are proudly building a charitable legacy spanning generations."

"While I always had the desire to be charitable, the logistics were quite complicated. I created the Leonard M. Lipman Diabetes Management Program at Venice Family Clinic, and The Foundation's knowledgeable staff helped me set up a reporting system to ensure that the money I donated was being used as I intended. I'm very pleased with the way this was done, and I'm grateful to the staff for making the giving process simpler and more effective."

The Center for Designed Philanthropy provides the resources, expertise, and connections to design thoughtful giving strategies tailored to your needs.

Oftentimes, donors have questions about their giving:

HOW DO I KNOW I AM MAKING A DIFFERENCE?
HOW DO I CHOOSE AMONG ALL THE CAUSES I LOVE?
HOW DO I INVOLVE MY CHILDREN?

The Center works closely with donors to answer their questions, explore their interests, and identify their passions, ultimately connecting them with outstanding programs and organizations. This helpful resource is available to all Foundation donors.

Vice President of the Center for Designed Philanthropy, Elana Wien, meets with members of the Max Factor Family Foundation.
